This is the first time that the Associated Charities has conducted a class or conference of exactly this character, and a good deal of interest was expressed.

Plans for the important annual meetng of the association were considered. Edward T. Devine, who had charge of the emergency relief work in San Francisce, was expected to speak at the annual meeting, but he wrote Secretary Weller, stating that he was already engaged to speak instead at the meeting of the National Red Cross Association in Washington. Other speakers of national reputation are therefore being considered. Justice David J. Brewer, president of the Associated Charities, took an especially active part in the meeting, and announc-
